A Weekly Legislative Report

Vol. 21 No. 5

02/12/2021

LEGISLATORS SEEK BACKGROUND

Rep. Clark Kauffman, Chairman of the House Ag Affairs Committee, requested that Rick Waitley make a presentation before the committee on Commodity Commissions in Idaho. Waitley made the presentation this week, providing background on structure, governance, finance and operations of different commodity groups in Idaho. Commodity Commissions are unique in their structure and function and there is definitely not a “one size fits all.” With nearly 190 commodities in Idaho, not every product has a commission – but many do. Some are large commodity commissions like wheat, dairy, potato and barley. Others are smaller commissions like mint, oilseed, cherry and honey but each serves a vital role in helping to educate consumers and producers promote the product and handle research regarding challenges within the specific commodity in Idaho.

HEMP MOVING FORWARD

The House Ag Affairs Committee voted to introduce H126 which would legalize industrial hemp in Idaho. The legislation would allow farmers the opportunity to grow industrial hemp if they so choose. The commodity is currently legal in 49 states, two territories and 40 tribal areas. The goal is to settle years of debate concerning how to allow for industrial hemp production by Idaho farmers and make the distinction between industrial hemp and marijuana in Idaho Code. Though industrial hemp (0.3% or less THC content) cannot be grown with marijuana or would be out of compliance and be impounded, there are still questions that arise that continued education will need to address going forward.

DEPUTY DIRECTOR

ISDA Director Celia Gould announced this week that Brian Oakey, who has served at ISDA for nearly 17 years, had departed the agency to become the Valley County Deputy Prosecutor. Many of us have worked long hours and attended countless meetings with Oakey and grew to appreciate his leadership and insight into industry issues. Director Gould has signaled that Chanel Tewalt will be appointed to the position of Deputy Director. Tewalt has been with the department for the past 14 years. Tewalt comes from an agriculture background in Oregon and served an internship at ISDA while attending BSU. Tewalt’s husband, Josh Tewalt, is the Director for the Idaho Department of Corrections.

PESTICIDE EXAM CENTERS

ISDA has announced an effort to offer computer-based pesticide applicator examinations in testing centers throughout Idaho. Coordinated with the Metro Institute, online examinations will provide additional certification opportunities for pesticide applicators. The exams will be proctored by ISDA, but the new effort with Metro Institute will significantly increase the number of times and testing sites available for the pesticide applicator community. Applicators, supervisors, or managers will need to register through the Metro Institute website before scheduling pesticide applicator examinations. The registration process is secure, easy and provides ISDA with needed information for processing examination dates and scores. The cost for using the testing centers is $65 per examination for professional license holders, and $55 per examination for private applicators and government employees.

Participating testing centers are located in several locations around the state:

- Boise (Boise State University, College of Western Idaho)
- Idaho Falls (College of Eastern Idaho)
- Lewiston (Lewis-Clark State College)
- Moscow (University of Idaho Testing Center)
- Nampa (College of Western Idaho)
- Pocatello (Idaho State University)

Metro Institute is working to coordinate additional testing centers throughout Idaho to provide a wider range of opportunities for Idaho pesticide applicators.

IRRIGATION FACILITIES AND EASEMENTS

Two pieces of irrigation legislation that we are watching will be addressed in the Senate Resources & Environment Committee in the coming days. Though they are not flashy topics, these issues are continually tweaked every legislative session to be sure that water and irrigation systems are properly protected and allow for irrigators to operate efficiently.

S1073 would clarify that the statutory protection of water delivery facilities that include their easements and rights-of-ways from claims of adverse possession extend to real property owned by water delivery entities. The statute also prevents people from preventing access of authorized personnel on those easements, rights-of-ways and real property.

S1074 would amend Idaho Code to codify the common law standard applied by Idaho courts regarding the extent to which debris may be deposited on a right-of-way or easement. In particular, Idaho Code currently recognizes that debris may be deposited within a right-of-way or easement but can occupy no more width of land along the banks of the canal or ditch than is absolutely necessary. The Idaho Supreme Court has interpreted the statute to hold the owners and operators of these facilities to a rule of reasonableness. The proposed amendments seek to align the statute with appellate court decisions by providing that debris may be deposited along the banks so long as the extent of it is reasonably necessary. S1074 would also clarify the rights and obligations associated with operating, cleaning, maintaining, and repairing the rights-of-way and easements.

INVESTMENT IN TECHNOLOGY

The 2021 Legislative Session has been one of the easiest for Idaho citizens to attend through virtual platforms. A large investment was made to enhance and provide for additional alternatives for anyone who wants to listen and watch the proceedings of the legislature. The website for the Idaho legislature is fairly easy to navigate. The address is as follows: <https://legislature.idaho.gov>. Spend a little time looking around and familiarize yourself with the various options. Once you figure out the meeting times and room location for various committees then you can also find the agenda and specific bills. From our office in Meridian, we spend a large amount of time on the computers and phones listening and watching the proceedings in Boise.
